me from Paris. Not long ago, the husband of a late in the affarneon, she was brought home scasseless and almost unrecognizable. But I must go back a lattle. The horse that drew the carrisge slipped in rounding a corner, the vehicle turned over and the face of its occupan was terribly multated with troken glass from the whodows. When the crowd which soon, surrounded the carriage had extricated thelpoor initie prisoner, she was taken, insensible, into the shop of the nearest chemist to have her inuries examined. The cuts and scratches were dreadful, but the worst was a gash from month to car from which a long pleep of lorn isable hung. The poor chemist seems to have bot his ised at the sight, for instead of sewing the pices in place again, be cut it off, and seeing that the patient remained unconscious, ho washed bis hands of her as quickly as possible, and saw her driven off in a cab to be taken home. The doctor who is called in breathless laste exclaims upon the butchery of the chemist's surgery, and says there is nothing to be done, but to take a piece

The Steamer Case of De. Jerth and Mr. Hide. By Eobert Louis Sterenson. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. For sale by W. R. Ayer & Co., Portland
This is truly a strange story, and the reader who finishes the first chapter will hardly class the book unti finished. A lawyer, Mr. Utbrewn, has a friend to whom he is much attached, named Dr. Jekyli. The latter makes a will leaving all his property—in case of death or mysterious disappearance—to a mysterious Mr. Hyde Mr. Itterson gradually gets an idea of the personality of Mr. Hyde. The latter is seen at miningh in he streets of London, trampling analysis you have been on the charm in the name of Dr. Jekyli. Soon an attorious nurder he committed, and it is prived by ond question that it was done by Mr. Hyde. The police search in vain for the cruze al. Before I've matter has died out of public memory Dr. Livyli locks himself up in his libration. For iwo weeks he sends his servants to mone end of Lindon to the other in search feerlan nameless druge. EMPLOYMENT OF CONFICE LABOR. How to employ convict labor is a question which every state is finding it difficult to iscule fit is sometimes assumed that our objects states have fully sibred that problem, but such an assumption is a mistake. In Oregon we have made no progress at all with it. It in the psupposed that New York was on of the states which had according a constraint of the total. which had acquired an experience that would withaily sattle the quest in, but is in it in its virtually said to the quest on, but it is not so.
The report of the superintends of cluste pushing of New Dick, just published, shows the the results of the effort to supersede the contract system and far from satisfactory. In lost new York should be system of contract tabut.
That is, by the act of the legislature of the year. the renewal of existing contracts for their labor and the making of new ones were probabled, and since that date the contracts have been gradually expiring. With nothing to take their place. The superintendent reports that the rewalls are very unfavorable. Many of the pre-moral, he says, are die, and their physical and moral state are deteriorating, while the loss in earnings, consequent upon the expiration of amounts to a very large sum, and imoses on the state an additional burden for support of the convicts in idleness. The superintendent reports that under the law prohibiting contract i toor, the only recourse to the "piece price" system, in which the or of convicts is let to outside manufacturers, who furn sh machinery and materials and pay a suppliated price for the furnished product, or to what is known as the 'public account' plan, which the state employs its convicts in man maching for its own profit. The latter will acquire, according to the super utenderts estimate, the investment of spital by the state to the smoont of $2,750,000, or at the rate of $1000 for each convict employed. The legislature of New York thus finds itself controlled, Within tess than two years after the change in to sys-tem of contract labor, with the necessity of making large appropriations for the support of idle prisoners, whose condition is steadily growing worse for fack of employment, or of em-backing on a larger scale in the business of man ufac uring. This condition is interesting and instructive, and yet it does not prove that the contract statem, all things considered, a the t that could be devised

We believe that convict labor ought to Le em ployed as much as possible upon public wn ks. - works of pu'lic utility, by which the whole yorks as the people cannot afford to push by direct taxation. In our own state we could utilize convict labor in making roads, if a proper system were organized to that end, and acthing s more wanted throughout the state than roa work Every county seat could be made the center of a system of rond work, through courted the roals, it couldn't be said that the simpleymest of the prisoners in this way would intro-duce any competition of confict with free labor

The unusual fros and unusual snow have been enjoyed with a zes—fitting their rarity
During the one nights of the early week scarce a labelde was without its troop of noisy and halps consters, old and young participating in this delightful and schularating sport. There were the usual number of slips and small accidents, but nothing serious Before the snow fell there were three or four days of good ice on the lakes north of the city and at East Portland, and multitudes engerly embraced the opportunity of neighbours, the more highly valued here because it is more. Wednesday a storm out an epd to this sport, probably for the seaso.

Four centuries ago the world stood on the eve of great events. A feverish excitement ran through all the nations of Eprope. The properties easily of men were filled with hopes, fears phetic souls of men were filled with hopes, fears and anticipations of an impeniling crisis which awas to reform and remodel the affa rs of manifold. It is a strange and as yet unexplained the momenon this vague dread and narrous expectation, which always precedes occapaging, becomes of criming calamities and bright hopes of pear relief from insupportable limitations in social, religious and political affairs parraded the masses between the Mediterraneau and the northern seas, and nations stood or tiptoe for the signal of the advent of great things, two plans, modest and unasseming men, were signally and unconsciously preparing themselves for their part in the drama of the world's history. The one, destined to break the greatest power then extant and to reshape the religious power then extant and to reshape the religious The one, desumed to break the greatest power then extant and to reshape the religious condition of Europe, was a poor buy, singing for alms in the strests of modest Risenach at the foot of the Wartturg, and the other, the future stresses of n new world, a make attantion. alms in the stresses is motion; then there are to foot of the Warthurg, and the other, the fiture discoverer of a new world, a plain eatlor, was tramping from court to court, to entist the great and powerful in his enterprise. What the seroms of his time conjectured, the spacificity of our earth and a western continent, was with him on absolute truth, in the cause of which he was willing to venture his reputation, his life, his all. His plans were derided and scoffed at as the hallucinations of a visionary. At last his andaunted courage and indomitable zeal cocquered. He received the command of three chail, scarcely seaworthy vessels from the king and queen of Spain, and with these, manned by 120 snitors and soldiers, he set jont on the 3d day of Angust, 1402, towards the unexplored regimes of the setting sun and atter a wearisome journey, and numerous attempts at mathry of his

Mr. A. stin Cortin, the Long Island railroad megnate and banker, speaking to the writer of his schene for revolutionizing exean travel, said gesterday. "It will cost $10,000,000 in all, or $1,250,000 for each of the six vessels. All the money is pledged to me by Americana, and the only thing I wait for is for congress to pass the bill allowing us to purchase the vessels from the only place where they can be made. Perry Belmont and John J Adams, of New York, are in charge of the bill. It has been before congress once this esseion and has been referred to the committee on commerce, which you know, made a unantinously favorable report upon it last session, but the session closed before the house could get to it. I have reason to be extremely hopeful that congress will pass the bill this session and that the president will sign it.
